Average cut 30 per cent

1997 cuts in line with expectations

by Andrew Milne

The province announced new cuts to municipal transfer grants December 19.

The cuts — which average around 30 per cent of last year's levels — were roughly in line with what municipalities were expecting.

Between this year's and last year's reduction, Anson, Hindon and Minden is receiving around half of what it was in 1995. Dysart, Stanhope, and Lutterworth townships have been similarly affected.

Said Anson, Hindon and Minden reeve Jeanne Anthon, "We've been monitoring it, and the clerk had predicted roughly those levels, so we're mentally prepared for it."

Municipalities were also happy the cuts were announced earlier this year, giving them more time to deal with the budgeting process.

The county's share of the cuts was down around 12 per cent of 1996 grants, due to a cap introduced by the province to protect rural areas from deeper cuts.

In line with predictions or not, early or not, however, say municipal sources, the cuts will still sting. "You can't cut $120,000 from a budget without some pain," said one Minden source.

Dysart reeve and county warden

Murray Fearrey said he expects local governments will deal with the cuts, and that no one got hurt badly enough yet to force restructuring, as some pundits are predicting will eventually happen.

Said Fearrey, "We'll deal with it. It's going to be difficult, no question about it, but we have no choice, we have to deal with it. We knew this was coming. We didn't know the amount, but we certainly knew there were cuts."

Fearrey's councils hadn't discussed cuts yet, and he wasn't ready yet to speculate where cuts might be made. Anthon's government has had some preliminary discussions, and expects to review savings efforts from 1996, and see how they might be extended. One retiring employee, said Anthon, would probably not be replaced, and some training would probably be done to allow employees to work more flexibly, and get around hiring temporary help.

Said Anthon, "The employees I must say cooperated 110 per cent in 1996 when we lost serious grants, and they've actually come in with some savings over budget. So the old attitude of spending to the limit of your budget is no longer prevalent, and we will be

Bonner's death a loss to the community

The community has lost a leader and willing worker in the passing of Sally Bonner. She died on December 17, at 56 years of age, following a valiant battle with cancer.

Described by all who knew her as a tireless worker and motivator, her loss will perhaps be most keenly felt by the members of the Royal Canadian Legion. It was in this organization that she made a lasting and indelible mark.

Sally Bonner moved to the Minden area from Kingston with her husband Bill in the mid 1970's. She joined Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 129 in Haliburton in 1975, transferring her membership from the Kingston Branch.

When a Legion Branch was created in Minden in 1987, she transferred her membership to 636, becoming an active and involved member in this new organization. She served on the executive committee of the Branch during its formative years and was Branch President from 1989 to 1991.

Her leadership abilities were recognized and she was named Deputy Zone (F4) Commander from 1991 to 1993 and then served two years as Zone Commander.

During the period from 1989 into the 90's, she also chaired the leadership and planning committee of Branch 636 helping to shape the aims and objectives of the organization.

She was also a member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Minden Branch.

Her service to the Royal Canadian Legion, over and above the call of duty, was recognized by the local Branch in October 1995 when Sally was awarded a life membership in the Minden organization.

At the time of her death, she was secretary of the Minden Branch, chair of the executive committee of Zone F4 and chair of the District F bursary fund.

Her dedication to the efforts of the Legion movement was evident in the hundreds of Legion members, representing branches throughout the area, who attended her funeral December 21.

In addition to her strong interest in the Legion, Sally Bonner was an avid curler. She was active with the executive of the Minden Curling Club and was always a willing helper when volunteers were needed to assist with organizing bonspiels or just being on hand to make sure participants could enjoy the event while she and other volunteers looked after organizational details.

Her leadership, enthusiasm, cheerful nature and community involvement will be missed by all who came in contact with her.

Councillor wants province to recognize seasonal residents

County councillor Jeanne Anthon introduced a motion to "petition the Premier of Ontario and the Ontario government to accurately reflect the level of service and governance demands on Haliburton County and similar counties by adding to all its documents the capability to recognize the seasonal resident population."

The provincial government currently uses the permanent population figure of 13,900 for statistical information purposes.

Anthon pointed out that "the permanent population in no way reflects the actual service demands of the County of Haliburton and the municipal governments from its taxpayers, both seasonal and permanent."

She contends that the number of households more accurately reflects governance considerations.

County council members endorsed the petition, which will be forwarded to premier Mike Harris.

Haliburton County plans to keep Sherborne et al

Officials of Sherborne et al want no part of becoming amalgamated with Parry Sound-Muskoka.

Sherborne et al reeve Ross Rabjohn learned that provisions of the "Who Does What Panel" report state that where a community of interest extends beyond current regional boundaries, consideration should be given to changing them. The week after the report was issued, Sherborne et al was notified by the Region of Muskoka was interested in taking Sherborne et al under its umbrella.

Rabjohn immediately fired off a letter to Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Al Leach stating that his municipality has no desire to leave the County of Haliburton.

He drafted another, more detailed letter to Leach, which he presented to Haliburton County council at the December meeting. He asked that council endorse his protests and reinforce Sherborne et al's bid to remain a part of Haliburton County.

Warden Murray Fearrey said that it was his understanding that Haliburton County officials would have to agree to any boundary changes and he assured Rabjohn that his council would not entertain such a change.

Both federal and provincial electoral boundaries have shifted Sherborne to Muskoka.

Five photos added to Hyland Crest Wall of Fame

Five photographs were added to the Hyland Crest "Wall of Fame" on December 20. The Wall of Fame inductees ceremonies were part of the Hyland Crest Family Christmas Party.

Hyland Crest activities director Linda Fry presented brief biographies of the inductees as assistant Janet Donnery showed the photographs to the people assembled in the auditorium.

Walter and Vera Stevens

Walter and Vera Stevens were the first inductees of the evening to be added to the Wall of Fame.

The Stevens' were married in England 57 years ago. They, and their 10 year-old daughter came to Canada in 1951.

"These people have had a wonderful life together and are very dedicated to each other," Fry said. "When Vera came to Hyland Crest, Walter followed so they could be together."

The photograph that graces the Wall of Fame was taken on their wedding day -- December 23, 1939.

Peggy Pettinger

Peggy Pettinger, who recently celebrated her 90th birthday. During her introduction Fry noted that Peggy was one of Canada's best short track skaters, earning dozens of trophies and medals. Six of those medals were gold. One of her proudest moments was winning the Ballard Cup at the age of 15.

Peggy and her husband Ed retired to Minden from Toronto in 1968. They had been cottagers in the Minden area since 1939.

Always community-minded, Peggy was a member of the Hyland Crest Auxiliary for 25 years. She received special recognition for her years of dedicated volunteer service in the New Horizons Program in 1992. She was instrumental in setting up the Meals on Wheels program in Minden.

Peggy remained active with the Minden Curling Club for many years as well.

The photograph of Peggy which adorns the Wall of Fame is from the 1930s. She is standing beside a trophy case full of mementos from her accomplishments as a Canadian skater.

Daisy Sutherland

Daisy Matilda Sutherland's picture was added to the Wall of Fame on December 20. She was born near Parry Sound on August 11, 1899.

"During the First World War, she worked in an ammunition factory," Fry said. "She married at age 19 and although she was tiny, she helped work a farm at Argyle and raised six children."

She also worked as a waitress and a nurse.

"She was a very busy person but always found time to lend a helping hand to her neighbours whenever she could."

Daisy was a resident of Hyland Crest from 1987 to 1989. She was especially fond of the music of the Grandfa-

I think we've reduced as much as we can and still deliver any kind of level of services that the population expects locally. Our employees are some of the hardest working people in the county, and they're very valuable in initiating cost reductions that cutting transfers has the potential to erode equity between rural and urban areas.

Anthon said one of the central issues of the cuts, as far as she is concerned, is equity across the province, and rural Ontario is especially vulnerable to low revenues through taxation etcetera. So does this mean we won't have libraries and community centres et cetera? Because we really can't afford them without some equity across the province."

Anthon also expressed hope that a new business park the municipality intends to open this coming summer will attract some producing businesses, and start bolstering the other side of the ledger.

Said Anthon, "We hope that this will provide for local economic growth and more revenues. You have to look at both sides of the economic statement -- not only how do we reduce expenditures but generate new revenues."

Said

Anthon, "My personal reaction is that the government grants were intended to provide equity

Retriever will be manufactured in Lutterworth

New product extends operator's reach into potentially dangerous locations

It all began with an intense interest in duck hunting.

Always an avid sportsman, Minden area resident Craig Kellett was faced with a problem when he went duck hunting late in the season. As the weather became colder, ice would form along the edges of ponds and rivers where he was hunting. The thin ice along the edge made it dangerous for hunters to put out and retrieve decoys.

It was equally dangerous for the dogs used to retrieve the fallen prey. After plunging into the water to retrieve the duck, a dog experienced problems as it attempted to climb out over the thin ice. The footing would be slippery and often break away under the weight of the dog. It was also dangerous to launch a boat or attempt to work from a canoe at that time of the year.

The problem became a challenge for Kellett in 1994 and he tried a number of devices which would allow him to place and retrieve the decoys. One device he considered was utilizing the rigid but flexible fibreglass poles used as extensions for chimney brushes. While these provided the reach and rigidity he was looking for, in most cases their length made them awkward to handle and transport. While floatation collars attached to the poles allowed it to be used on water, they impeded the use of the pole across land or in marshy areas.

Craig and his brother had previously operated K-Line Construction, a company which, among other tasks, built high tension power lines. Kellett borrowed from his knowledge of cable work, and combined it with a fibreglass pole to create a device that will do the job he wanted done. After a number of attempts, involving a variety of combinations, he finally hit upon just the right mix and created what he calls the Kellhobby Retriever.

The Kellhobby Retriever looks like a coiled piece of hose with a smooth cover. However, unrolled and laid flat on the ground, it become a rigid pole that can be pushed through thick brush,

It was Craig Kellett's interest in duck hunting which led him to develop the Sports Retriever. The unit comes with a back pack that makes it easy to carry into the field. He plans to begin production of the Retriever at a factory on Highway 35 just south of Minden.

The Retriever can be easily unrolled, creating a rigid pole that can be pushed through brush, across ice and water. An extended Retriever can be seen lying on the ground behind Craig Kellett as he rolls a length of the device.

across ice and on top of water. It is what is underneath the smooth cover that gives this device its special qualities.

•He started with a fibreglass core. Similar to a chimney brush rod, it is only at 4.5 mm thick. The fibreglass provides the strength to the core of the retriever and yet is flexible enough to allow the device to be coiled into a loop for easy transportation.

•The core is surrounded with a polyethylene layer that was 70% void. The polyethylene is a flexible extruded plastic foam. The 70% refers to the amount of air trapped in the extruded plastic foam and it is this layer which provides the buoyancy for the retriever. The foam is also flexible and holds the fibreglass rod in place.

•The foam is encased in an aluminum sheath that protects the foam layer from sharp edges and provides additional rigidity to the Retriever.

•Finally the entire product is wrapped in a plastic coating, again to protect the inner layers and create a smooth even surface for the outside of the Retriever.

•At each end of the 50 or 75 foot length, coupling devices have been added. This allows additional lengths of the Retriever to be added to the original, or an attachment such as a hoop, net or variety of hooks to be installed at the working end, depending on the task at hand. An off-set handle can be attached to the operator end of the Retriever.

The Retriever can easily be transported coiled in a 20 inch roll weighing less than 25 pounds.

With the patents in place to protect his invention, Kellett is ready to go into production. He has purchased the former Gull River Build All property on Highway 35, just south of the Lutterworth Municipal office and has started marketing the device.

While its use as an aid to hunters was the driving force behind his invention, many other uses have quickly come to mind. Any unsafe situation, such as those involving thin ice came to mind and as a result he has made a heavier version of the Retriever and has demonstrated its potential to fire departments and other rescue services as one way of reaching victims without having to venture out onto the ice. "The operator remains on the shore and can extend his reach far out into the water to reach someone in trouble," he commented. The heavier model comes with a reel for easy storage and transportation. As the Retriever is pulled off the reel, rollers straighten it.

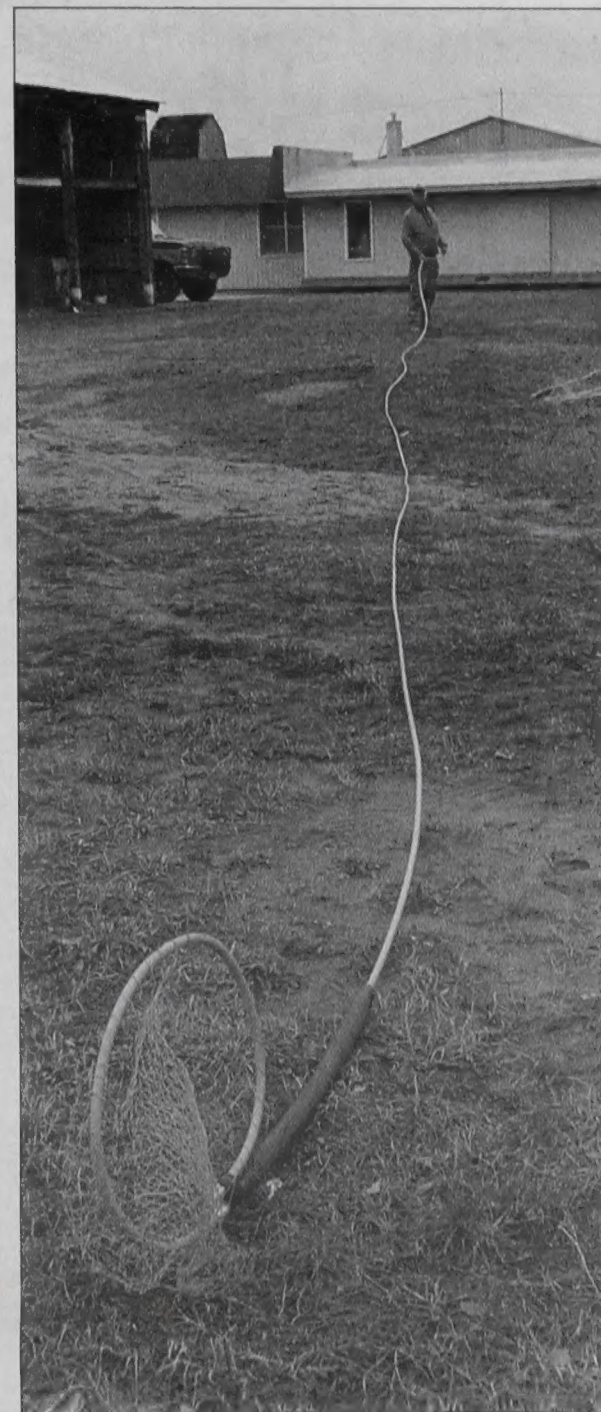

"The Retriever has surpassed anything I thought it might have been at the beginning," he commented. He has extended the unit to 350 feet and found it still manoeuvrable. While the rigidity allows the Retriever to be pushed out in a straight line, by twisting the handle at the operator end, the working end of the extension 'walks' left or right, allowing it to be directed around obstructions.

While Kellett considers the rescue application of the device an important aspect of the product, the hunter market is still one he will follow. Advertisements have just been placed in sporting magazines and inquiries have started to arrive.

Kellett expects to begin production at the Highway 35 location early in the new year and with the suggestions offered by individuals who have seen the Retriever, he feels the marketing possibilities are limitless.

A 50 foot length sports model with a hoop and net and operator handle retails for under $300.

(At the left) The simple handle allows the operator to direct the Retriever by flipping the net. A single turn of the handle results in an equal turn at the other end. In this demonstration, Kellett has pushed the Retriever through thick grass, down an embankment and up a ridge over 100 feet away.

Extended, the Retriever can be 'walked' into position by the operator. As he turns the handle, the hoop or net at the end in the foreground rolls to a new location. An extra piece of flotation, (a piece of plastic pipe insulation), has been taped just behind the net hoop to help keep it up as it is pushed forward across water.

Carpe diem — here's to 1997

Editorial

In this, the last issue of 1996, The Times has found itself publishing no small number of stories of business openings and related ventures.

It's a nice note to end on, as 1996 fades away. One can only hope it will prove a fitting capstone to what has been a difficult year for local businesses. May this, one wishes along with those who have ventured capital, and with those whose livelihood depends on these new ventures' success, be the shape of things to come.

Haliburton county is beginning a new year. And as this region — a region that faces high and chronic unemployment — a region where the cold numbers of economic hardship often translate very directly into human misery — wakes up January 1 to whatever that morning brings, may that archetypical new beginning translate into real beginnings.

The Times offers, therefore, in this last few inches as the last paper goes to press, as is traditional, a toast and a resolution.

Raise a glass, first, to all who bring their vision, their courage, and their entrepreneurial savvy to this sometimes forbidding climate, with a dream to follow, and the drive and determination to make it happen. And to all who have laboured here, these many years, paying their dues, providing the fuel on which the community functions.

And resolve, for 1997, come what may, to make it a year to remember, and a year to be proud of.

A tribute to the Beaver

Sure is tough to be a Canuck these days — especially if you happen to be a hero worshipping type. Canadian politics is a write-off. We've got a bumbling PM incomprehensible in both official languages, a Tory opposition that could hold its national convention in a motorcycle with a sidecar and a Reform Party leader who looks like he had his hair styled by a Cuisinart.

The national railway system has been vaporized, the national broadcasting system is on its last-legs and between them, greedy doctors and pinhead politicians have just about succeeded in burying what's left of Medicare in an unmarked grave.

Sports? Don't even mention sports. The Blue Jays bowed out early on cleats of clay. The official emblem of the Canadian Football League is a tin cup full of pencils. And the Yanks, the bums, whupped our butts at our own National Game.

Thank God we've still got the Beaver.

I'm not referring to the rotund rodent. I'm talking about the de Havilland Beaver — DHC-2 born in Downsview, Ontario on August 16, 1947. Thirty feet long, nine feet tall, forty-eight feet from wingtip to wingtip and, some would say, homely as the hind end of a hog.

Homely perhaps — but one of the very best aircraft this old planet has ever seen. And one hundred percent Canadian too.

One thing that made the Beaver an instant success is that designers consulted their potential customers before they started drawing up blueprints. The customers in this case were folks who had business to conduct in the Canadian bush.

Accordingly, de Havilland honchos interviewed fishermen, prospectors, mining executives, loggers, emergency medical crews as well as people from the ministry of transportation. They found a market for a plane that could take off and land on small lakes, carry a lot of gear and fly through anything the North could throw at it.

Then they went back to their drawing boards and came up with merely the best damned bush plane in the world.

That's not simple-minded patriotism on my part. The rest of the world thought so too. At last count, 63 foreign countries had laid down their pesetas, deutchmarks, escudos, pounds and rubles to buy Beaver aircraft. There are Beavers in Australia and Japan. In Chile and Rwanda and at both Poles too. You can find them in the deserts of the middle east and droning over the jungles of Borneo.

One of the biggest Beaver customers was the United States Government. They bought nearly a thousand of them — which is more than half the Beavers that were ever built.

And — here's a surprise — the Canadian Air Force passed. Didn't buy a single craft.

The Yanks, by contrast, knew quality when they saw it. The Beaver won both the U.S. Air Force and the U.S. Army competitions for utility aircraft in 1951. Not long after, the Beaver went to war. In Korea, Canada's workhorse was used so much it was nicknamed "The General's Jeep". It was still being used by Americans in the War in Vietnam. There, it was known as "the half-ton flying pickup truck."

Not a bad description. The Beaver can safely carry half a ton of gear and still take off on a strip or a lake no longer than two football fields.

And they are just about unstoppable. One pilot once boasted to a doubtful passenger that he could stall his plane and still make a safe landing. He cut the engines, coasted for six miles and brought her in for a perfect three point landing.

Exactly how good is the Beaver? So good that there are still about a thousand of them up there, even though there hasn't been one come off the assembly line for the past 29 years.

So good that there are actually more of them in service today than there were ten years ago.

So good that there are aeronautical engineers who make a comfortable living flying around the world, finding the carcasses of abandoned Beavers and hauling them out of the swamps or junkyards and back to Canada where they are restored and put back into service.

So good, that even as I write, the pop star Kenny G is having his own personal Beaver rebuilt in Seattle — at a cost of close to half a million bucks.

This coming August, the Beaver will celebrate its golden anniversary. Fifty years of unparalleled performance all around the world.

It's one of Canada's greatest success stories.

A pity the Beaver can't play hockey. Or run for office.

Craig Crowe scores four goals in KDD win over Home Hardware

Westside edges Hartwick 9-7 in MMHA action

by Jerry Grozelle

Nine was the magic number in Minden Men's Hockey Association play December 23. The winning team in each of the two games scored nine times on their way to victory.

Westside 9, Hartwick 7

Westside Jug City started the evening's entertainment with a 9-7 win over Hartwick Construction. Westside led 2-1 at the end of the first period but trailed 5-4 going into the third. Hartwick remained in contention until Westside pulled in front by two goals late in the third period.

Jamie Dollo picked up six points for the winners with two goals and four assists. Gord Wood and Craig Phillips each added two goals to the winning tally. Wood also had a pair of helpers. Tony Vanlieshout notched a goal and four assists and single goals went to Ben Manuge and Kent Taylor. Doug schell picked up two assists.

Tom Bagshaw and Jeff Howe netted two goals apiece for the Hartwick crew. Bagshaw also had a pair of assists. Glenn Hall scored one goal and assisted on another one, while Wyatt Nesbitt and Terry Allore netted one marker apiece. Two assists each went to Bern Berry, Andrew Burk and Mark Thompson.

KDD 9, Home Hardware 3

Kountry Double D tripled Home Hardware 9-3 in the evening's second game. After giving up the first goal of the game to Home Hardware, KDD rebounded to take a 2-1 lead into the second frame. KDD outscored Home 3-1 in the middle period and 4-1 in the third to outdistance the opposition.

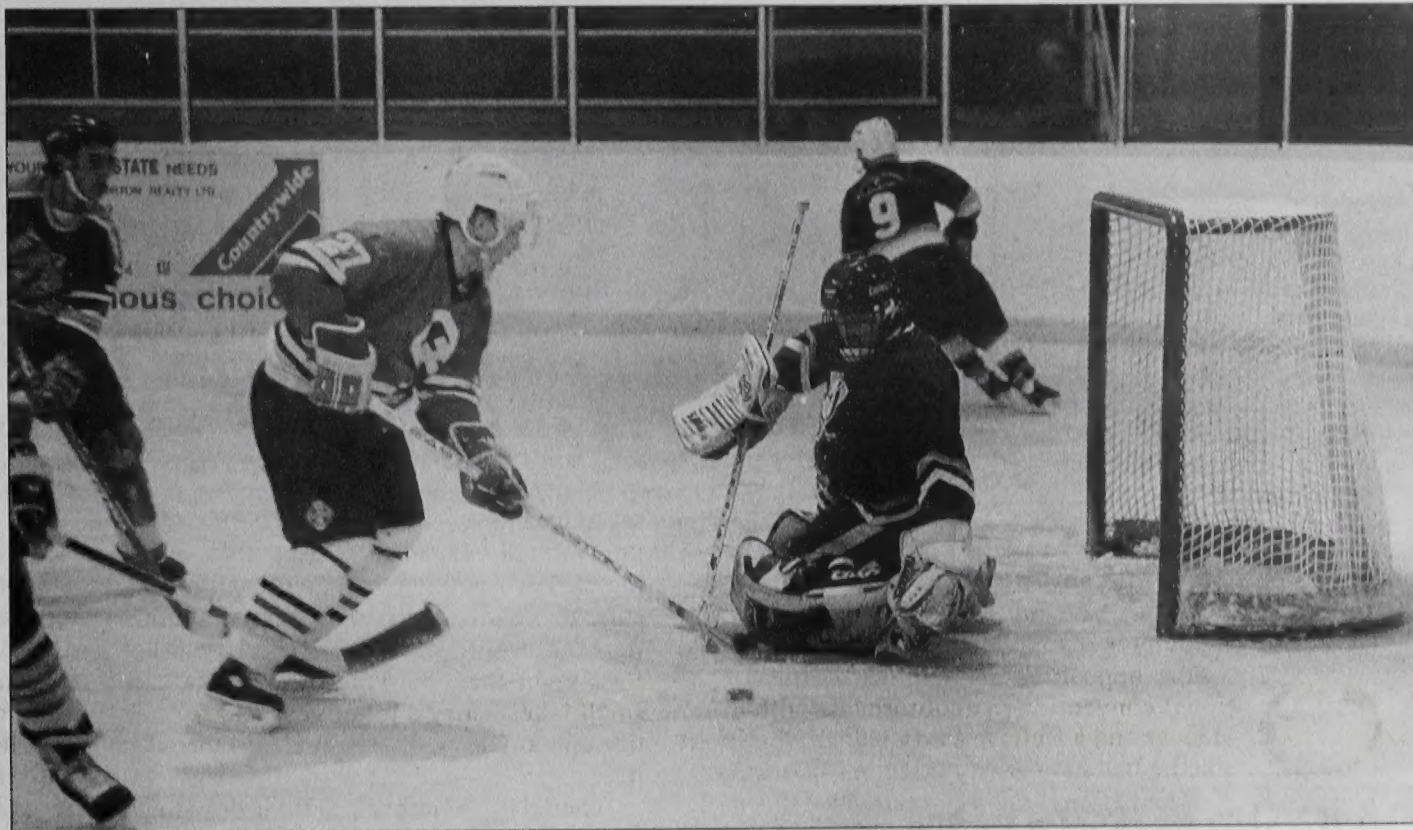

Craig Crowe was the top gun of the game for the KDD crew, with four goals to his credit. Scott Hamilton notched two goals and three helpers. Andy Schollig scored one goal and helped set up two. John Hewson had a goal and one assist and Dwayne Warburton netted one goal. Paul Walker picked up two assists and Scott Danilko had one.

The Home Hardware snipers were Mike Keaney, Clark Craig and Richard Cormier with one goal each. Keaney also had a single assist, as did Dean Sisson, Peter Allore and Tom Haley.

KDD RULES: Kountry Double D skated to a 9-3 romp over Home Hardware in Minden Men's Hockey Association play at the Minden arena December 23. Craig Crowe paced the KDD attack with four goals.

Novice A Monarchs shade Woodville 2-1

The Minden OMHA novice Monarchs travelled to Woodville to face off against their hosts for the third time this season.

Woodville got the jump on the Minden squad, scoring early in the first period. But that would be the only shot to get past Monarchs goaltender Nick Wallace.

The host team remained in front by that 1-0 margin as the second period started. But Cody Mills scored the equalizer and then what proved to be the game winner later in the frame.

Zachary Joanu assisted on the first goal and Aaron Keaney set up the second.

Judd Campbell played a strong defensive game for the Monarchs, helping Wallace to keep the opposition off the scoreboard for the second and third periods to preserve the 2-1 win.

Tyke C team earns 1-1 tie with Beaverton

With just six players to take on the visiting Beaverton 2 team, Minden's Mighty Tyke C hockey players would need every bit of energy they could muster. The team has only nine players to start with, but three were out of commission on the sick list. One of those players who was sidelined was the goalie, so Paddy Manuge and Brent Doiron each took a turn defending the Minden net.

For three 10-minute periods, there would be no rest for any of the Minden players.

Beaverton jumped to an early lead, with Nick Whalen scoring at the 2:54 mark of the first period.

Neither team was able to score throughout the rest of the opening frame. The second was scoreless and the third was more than half over before another goal was scored. Edward Cyr was the sniper, with assists going to Tanner Graham and Jared Mills. Cyr's goal, with 4:06 remaining in the third, was the last of the game as the two teams dueled to a 1-1 tie.

Trappers vital to furbearer conservation

by Jerry Grozelle

Trapping for commercial purposes has been a part of the Canadian culture since the first Europeans settled in North America. It was trappers who first charted most of the water courses.

For more than 200 trappers from the district, the 1996-97 season is well under way. In fact, the mink, fisher marten and raccoon seasons close at the end of the year.

One shipment of fur was stamped at the Minden office of the Ministry of Natural Resources a few weeks ago and transported to the sale in North Bay. Conservation officer Bob Gater, his daughter Sarah and Brian Austen, president of the Minden District Fur Harvesters spent a Saturday morning stamping and recording the pelts which were brought in by local trappers.

Trapping has changed from what it was even 15 or 20 years ago. In order to obtain a trapping licence, a prospective fur harvester must complete a two-part course, which is offered at Sir Sandford Fleming College. The first part culminates with a written examination after classroom instruction. Then, the course participants do a practical examination, in the field, to make sure they can properly set the various traps for the most humane possible harvest.

Gater explained that there are two types of trap lines -- private land and Crown land.

Those who trap on Crown land are subject to quotas on beaver, fisher and marten and the trapper must take at least 75 per cent of his (or her) assigned quota. The quota is based on the estimated number of the particular animals within the trapper's zone. Gater cited one and a half beaver per house as an example of the formula which is used to set a quota.

The private land trappers aren't subject to the quotas of their Crown land counterparts. In private land situations, Gater explained, "It is basically the trapper's responsibility to manage the resource. We give them the education. It's not in their interest to trap an area out. They have to make sure they have enough to harvest next year."

Other factors must be taken into account when trappers manage their zones. In the case of beavers, populations fluctuate from year to year, depending on water levels and predation by other animals, such as bears and coyotes. Beaver are especially vulnerable when they have to travel far overland to get to their food sources.

All of the animals that are taken must be accounted for, even those for which the trapper doesn't have a quota. If, for example, a fisher is taken in an area where the trapper doesn't have a quota for those animals, it is taken to the Ministry. It would then be turned over to the local trapping association, where it would be used for demonstration purposes at a workshop. It would later be sold

Workshop/Fun Day

The Minden District Fur Harvesters will host a Workshop and Fun Day at the Minden Community Centre Sunday, January 19 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The event will feature a fur fashion show, sponsored by Bernard Cahill Furs of Peterborough.

"See how fur coats are made," says Minden District Fur Harvesters president Brian Austen.

A number of booths will be set up and there will be contests and door prizes.

"Come out and enjoy the day," Austen encourages. "Support your local (fur) council and the trapping industry as a whole."

and the money turned over to the Trapping Association.

A royalty must be paid to the government for every fur which is harvested. The royalty is five per cent on the average prices of the previous year.

Fur prices are on the upswing after several years of being at the very low end of the scale. Demand is increasing, which pushes the prices up.

Austen explained that Russia is the top fur producing nation in the world, but trappers there can't keep up with the demand. Consequently, many of the furs harvested in Canada are shipped to Russia. Japan is another major market for Canadian fur.

The industry isn't likely to become a full-time employer for anyone in this area. Gater explained that trapping is a hobby that generates enough to buy gas and insurance for snowmobiles, with a modest profit for the skilled trapper.

Average prices paid for the various species at the last sale of 1996 were: Beaver $45, otter $71, mink $27, marten $51, fisher $41, red fox $26 and raccoon $21.

Even though the profit margin is low, Gater says there is a waiting list of people who have passed the course and want a trap line.

"We work with the local trappers' council to ensure a fair distribution of (Crown land) trap lines," Gater said.

Trapping is a very important conservation tool, Gater says.

"When you have too many animals you get disease and poor quality fur," he said. "Too many is almost worse than not enough."

He noted that nuisance animal control is another valuable, humane service that some trappers provide.

The next sale will be in mid-January. That's when the bulk of the fur will be stamped and shipped to the buyers.

Letter to the Editor

Police communications system found lacking

Dear Editor:

Shortly after 12 noon on December 26 I received an urgent telephone call from my brother, who was travelling from Sudbury to Minden for a family reunion. He had just survived a head-on collision fifty kilometres north of Parry Sound on Highway 169. He quickly explained he was using his car phone and did not have his directory at hand. He asked if I would call the police here to have them dispatch an ambulance and the OPP to the scene.

I immediately dialled the local number for our area. It was forwarded to Coboconk. A recorded message then came on, giving a 1-888 number to call. The message was so quiet I had to hang up, call again, and cover one ear to hear it and write it down.

I called the 1-888 number, and explained what happened, and requested that the police dispatch someone to the scene. Whoever answered then asked me if there wasn't anyone closer [to the scene] who I could call, to which I replied that I didn't know, and that's why I called this number.

I then called the local ambulance number and explained the situation. After a short time, they relayed the message and two ambulances were dispatched.

Following the call to the ambulance, I again dialled the 1-888 number and suggested the Coboconk message be re-recorded, loud enough to be heard without so much difficulty.

But maybe next time someone calls the police here in Minden, a real person will answer the phone — not a pre-recorded message from Coboconk.

If a university graduate didn't know what number to call in the area being driven through, how could a child living here — where 911 is not available — be expected to deal with a life and death situation? Are we still second class citizens, or is 911 just not feasible here?

It seems time and money are running out. The local health board is pushing for the new hospital to be built here in Minden at the site of Hyland Crest. But the extra time it takes to drive through Minden could be the difference for some lives.

Are we going to be turning the sod at a new location, or digging graves for countless people who didn't make it to the emergency room on time?

By the way Virginia, I do believe in Santa Claus.

thers. Daisy Sutherland died in 1989, but her memory will live on with the picture, which was taken on her 25th anniversary -- April 2, 1944.

Agnes Mullins

Born in Toronto in 1899, Agnes Mullins and her husband owned a grocery store and butcher shop in Weston, Ontario for many years. The couple took a drive to Minden and fell in love with the area. They sold the store in Weston and Ellen Cliff Lodge, which is now known as Heather Lodge on the south end of Twelve Mile Lake. The business started with two cabins but they soon had it built into a thriving tourist resort.

Widowed at age 65, Agnes learned to drive, and she retained her driver's licence for 20 years.

She loved her independence and she drove to many destinations in Canada and the United States. Now, at age 97, she remains independent.

"She's a very sweet lady and we are very pleased to place her picture on our Wall of Fame," Fry said.

Horace and Lorraine Brown

Horace and Lorraine Brown celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary and renewed their vows at Hyland Crest on August 1, 1996. They were married in Ottawa in 1936 while Horace was working as a reporter for the Ottawa Citizen.

Horace had a distinguished career as a reporter for other papers as well, such as the Toronto Star, Toronto Telegram, Mail and Empire and Ottawa Citizen. He was also a script writer, mystery writer (with eight published books to his credit), public relations specialist and municipal politician. He also served on the executive of several organizations.

A victim of polio from infancy, Horace never let his disability get in the way of his goals.

In 1948, he founded the Canadian branch of the March of Dimes, to help fight the disease that afflicted him.

From 1960 to 1972, Horace was an alderman in Toronto.

Lorraine was a home economist for most of her married life. As daughter Hilary explained, "She was a loving mother, wonderful cook and hostess. Over the years she accompanied my dad on many political outings... she met many dignitaries, including royalty. She still has a dress and hat that she wore while being introduced to the Queen some 30 years ago."

Horace and Lorraine Brown moved to Hyland Crest in May of 1996 to be near their family.

$500 RICHER: Times publisher Jack Brezina presented Karoul Talaba of Haliburton with a cheque for $500 in time to do some Christmas shopping. Talaba filled out the winning ballot at Varty's Jewellery Store in Haliburton. The $500 was the grand prize in the The Times' Hometown Christmas promotion.

Horace passed away on October 24.

The photograph of the Browns that holds a place on the Wall of Fame was taken during their honeymoon in early August of 1936.

Family Christmas at Hyland Crest

Residents of Hyland Crest celebrated Christmas with family and friends December 20. The annual Family Christmas celebrations included entertainment by The Grandfathers, food, eggnog, punch and desserts.

And, of course, no Christmas celebration would be complete without a visit from jolly old Saint Nick, himself. The evening also featured the induction of several current and past residents of Hyland Crest to the "Wall of Fame."

Santa, bottom photo, knew who was naughty and who was nice. (Everybody was nice.) Here he rewards one of the residents with a present.

The auditorium was full for the event.

Students enjoy pre-Christmas fun at Ridgewood Public School

by Alana Austin and Lisa Handley
Ridgewood Grade 6 students

Many activities took place during the last week of school before the Christmas break to celebrate Christmas. Students, teachers and parents sang Christmas carols every day.

On Tuesday, the primary classes did Christmas crafts, such as cookie Christmas ornaments, paper candy canes, square dancing, colouring Christmas pictures, writing letters to Santa, candle making, music, cranberry hearts, working with wool and lots more.

Guest choirs from Dr. George Hall Public School entertained the students and parents.

On the Thursday evening, the Ridgewood choir sang for their parents and the kindergarten youngsters delighted their parents with their performances.

A soccer olympics was held by the junior grades, with Canada taking the gold.

By Friday, the students were really excited. They celebrated with a House League assembly, Christmas lunches, pioneer turkey dinner, class parties and an intermediate dance.

Ridgewood hopes everyone had a safe and joyous Christmas and wishes everyone a happy new year.

ENTERTAINERS: Ridgewood Public School kindergarten youngsters entertained family and friends.

COOKIE ORNAMENTS: Primary students make Christmas cookie ornaments.

SCOOTER OLYMPICS: Grade 5 and 6 students competed against each other in the scooter olympics. Canada beat out the USA and Jamaica to win the gold.

New business opens at Kennisis Lake

Left to right are George Schvarcz, Blake Sisson, Jim Fryer, Regan Sisson, Brian Mann, and Heidi Rokenbauch of Haliburton Outdoor Equipment. Schvarcz, an electrical engineer and former owner of Commercial Switch Gear Limited — a large business producing commercial grade electrical equipment — says he intends to run a clean, professional, service-oriented facility.

On the Kennisis Lake road, adjacent to Haliburton Forest and Wildlife's base camp, a new compound has been carved out of the timber.

It's 3,200 square feet of floor space — with the high ceilings and spacious feel of a serious, professional shop — surrounded by a security fence and alarm systems.

For George Schvarcz, it's a step back from the rat race.

Schvarcz, prior to opening Haliburton Outdoor Equipment, ran Commercial Switch Gear Limited — a large operation handling industrial strength electrical equipment. He owned the business for 19 years, building it from the ground up.

Schvarcz and wife Heidi Rokenbauch came, like many, to the area after cottaging here for years. They own a home in West Guilford.

Schvarcz says he intends to earn his customers, and from the determined approach he's taking, it sounds like he's got a good chance of doing that.

Says Schvarcz, "I know you have to do that. That's what it's all about... You can't just sit back and wait for them to come to you."

He's already got a few things going appropriate to that vision. Haliburton Outdoor Equipment promises to go to the customer to bring sick snowmobiles in to the shop if necessary, and boasts portable welding units available for on the spot equipment repair.

He has an agreement with Haliburton Forest and Wildlife for service and repairs to the outfit's snowmobiles and trucks.

Schvarcz will be dealing in Yamaha snowmobiles, Kubota tractors, and Stihl chainsaws, as well as selling snowmobile clothing. He also offers brand new demonstration machines for interested buyers. Demos can be tried out, he says, on HFW's 300 km of trails.

"We're going to run a clean business," he says. "There will be no fingerprints on machines coming out of here. I guarantee it."
